CHARLIE'S BEAT

This is a story I've been looking forward to researching and writing for a long time. Gabby Hammersley is the creative force behind the amazing and stunningly original food creations at Off Broadway Taproom. If you've eaten there you know exactly what I'm talking about. And if you haven't, well, you're missing some of the best food in Madison, bar none.

But how did she land in our little neck of the woods? How did she become such a great chef? And what's next on the horizon for her? Let's dig in, shall we?

"I came to Madison about 10 years ago, and I was literally like a day over 18 years old. I'm originally from the Indianapolis area, where I'd worked at several

HRC mulls focusing its role on education, outreach

BY BOB DEMAREE

The city of Madison's Human Relations Commission is moving towards defining itself more as an entity for education and outreach about discrimination rather than an entity to receive and investigate discrimination complaints.

The commission met Wednesday morning and continued to discuss its role in terms of submitting recommendations to Mayor Bob Courtney and City Council on updating what's defined as its duties and powers.

JCBT awards $293,500 for building local tourism

BY BOB DEMAREE

With more than $500,000 in funding requests, Jefferson County Board of Tourism announced its tourism grants at Monday's meeting, whittling the total down to $293,500.

"We're given an impossible task. We just want to say yes (to everything) because we're all in this together," said JCBT President Trevor Crafton. However, he said JCBT's budget was not able to fully fund all 16 requests seeking $513,500. With $350,000 budgeted this year for grants and another cycle planned later in the year, JCBT allocated $293,500 Monday leaving just $56,500 for a second cycle of awards in the fall.

"We have to create railings," said Crafton, noting a list of things JCBT considers when awarding grant from capital improvements, infrastructure, visitor experience and "big grand ideas, big marketing."

Madison Music Movement and Madison Area Arts Alliance each received $50,000 — the highest amounts given — event though Madison Music Movement had requested the $70,500 it received last year and Madison Area Arts Alliance requested $70,000 after receiving $68,650 last year. Crafton encouraged both organizations to come back to talk to JCBT before the second grant cycle in August.

Madison Rodeo received $40,000, which was less than the $50,000 requested but more than the $35,000 received last year. "We love the bold statement of sustainability over the next couple of years," said Crafton after organizers indicated a plan for the rodeo to move forward without future support from JCBT by securing sponsorships and other funding.

Jefferson County Historical Society (JCHS) received $35,000, which was less than the $43,000 requested and $200 less than the $35,200 received last year.

The city of Madison's request for $25,000 to help designate a specific area of Madison's Historic District as a Designated Outdoor Refreshment Area (DORA) — where patrons 21-years and older can purchase alcoholic beverages from approved businesses within the DORA and carry them outside to be consumed within the DORA's boundaries — was fully funded to establish signage and trash receptacles necessary to implement that proposal.

MadHop received $24,000, an increase over last year's $20,000 grant, but less than the $65,500 requested. "You guys are a start-up, and I think it's awesome. You guys are going to continue to grow and get better," said Crafton.

Nights Before Christmas Candlelight Tour of Homes had requested $15,000, and was awarded that amount, the same that was requested last year.

Last year JCBT had provided $25,000 each to Madison Ribberfest BBQ & Blues and Madison Chautauqua Festival of Art, but reduced that to $10,000 each this year. Ribberfest had again requested $25,000 while Chautauqua had requested $31,800.

The 5 to the 5 vintage race boat group, an organization that is working towards the goal of establishing a National Boat Racing Heritage Center for the display of race boats and boat racing artifacts, sought money to support its Madison Vintage Thunder event in September. The grant amount awarded was $10,000, the same as last year but less than this year's request of $30,000. "I would strongly encourage them to take a look at partnering with (Madison) Regatta," said Crafton.

Visit Madison Inc. had three projects that were funded — $10,000 for sponsoring the Indiana Preservation Conference in October, $8,500 for establishing a wireless network to improve wireless internet capabilities, and $5,000 for hosting Indiana Chamber Executive Conference (ICEA) in June. Two of the three were fully funded while the ICEA had requested $6,000, which is $1,000 more than was awarded.

Crafton said support for the wireless network is a

Man charged with possession of child pornography

BY THE COURIER STAFF

A Madison man was arrested Monday on a warrant for possession of child pornography following a year-long investigation by Indiana State Police Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force investigators.

Jefferson County deputies arrested Ryan K. Adams, 42, following an investigation initiated in April 2023.

Detectives served a search warrant at Adams' residence in May 2023. Investigators analyzed digital devices recovered during that search and, as a result of the investigation, Jefferson County Superior Court on March 22 issued an arrest warrant for Adams on five counts of Possession of Child Pornography, all Level 5 felonies.

Adams is being held in the Jefferson County Criminal Justice Center on a $50,000 cash-only bond.

A jury trial has been scheduled for June 18.

Fire destroys house on Ringwald Road in Monroe Township

BY BOB DEMAREE

A two-story house on Ringwald Road in Monroe Township was destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning.

The homeowner awoke to the smell of smoke early Tuesday and found the home, located in the vicinity of U.S. 421 and State Road 250 just off of Graham Road, on fire.

The fire was reported at 6:08 a.m. and a Jefferson County Sheriff's Officer who arrived first on the scene confirmed a working structure fire, according to Chris Lee, president of the Canaan Volunteer Fire Department. He said Madison Township Volunteer Fire Department was actually the fire firefighters to arrive.

The couple who lived in the house successfully escaped unharmed and there were no injuries to firefighters but the home was a total loss.

"They pretty much lost everything," said Lee, who noted that members of Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church are helping gather clothes and other necessities "to help get them back on their feet." He said they have access to a camper to be able to temporarily stay on the property.

"It was a very rough fire" to fight, said Lee, noting that an excavator was utilized to pull some of the contents away and gain access to the fire and hot spots. "We fought that all day ... There was a lot of stuff in the old house that hampered the firefighting."

He said the biggest part of the fire was contained by around 10:30 a.m. but there continued to issues with hot spots throughout the day. "It was just getting it so it didn't reignite," he said. Most of the hot spots were contained by 4 p.m. but it wasn't until 8:30 p.m. that all hot spots were out.

Assistance was provided by Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency Director Matt True, who flew a drone above the structure to help locate hot spots.

Rykers Ridge Volunteer Fire Department, which brought a tanker, Norton King's Daughters' EMS, and the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department were all on scene and the Southeastern Indiana REMC arrived to shut off electric and the excavator was provided by LJ Sales and Rental.

The cause of fire is under investigation.

"If you're talking to the community and you're getting out there and finding out what the issues are, you can make recommendations, you don't have to wait for an issue," said Jessica McAlister, chair of the Human Relations Commission. "The problem is if you're waiting for an issue, you're missing a lot of things as well."

McAlister said by focusing on education and outreach, the Human Relations Commission could be proactive instead of reactive. "We're not waiting for discrimination to happen," but instead the board is "reacting to what is needed in our community and recommending education, outreach and other opportunities based on what we're hearing from these populations in the community." She said the commission can also be a source to direct people to the best place to register a complaint.

The current duties and powers of the Human Relations Commission includes language making it an investigative arm of the city. The members voiced concern with that role, particularly vice chair Katy Hadley who doesn't think the commission members have the legal training to do that.

The city's ordinance states the commission is empowered to act as conciliator in matters of discrimination involving race, color, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or gender identity.

Curt Gardner, principal of Shawe Memorial High School who was attending his first meeting as a commission member, noted that "age" should also be included. "Ageism is a thing and as principal of a school I get driven nuts about how people instinctively judge teenagers wrongly and, as a grandson of a grandmother I love, I get frustrated" about how older people are judged Gardner said.

Hadley noted that people with disabilities are also left off the list of discriminations.

Tammy Acosta, the mayor's assistant who serves as the city's representative at the meetings, said the ordinance is "missing things because it used to just say 'any discrimination' against anyone.' " She said that changed when the ordinance was amended to list "certain sub-groups. We did try to say, can we just leave it 'any' because when we sub-group we're going to miss somebody."

"I think these lists also get created in contrast because there are federal protections for some identities and not for others, and when you're the city, you want to step in and make sure (the non-protected identities are covered), so there's some power in naming," said Hadley, adding she sees the value of doing it both ways — naming the groups and also just saying "any."

Acosta said it is important to "bring awareness when there's a group that feels like it's not being seen. So, we need to educate people that this group is here, we need to give them the same rights as everybody else, so I understand it," she said. "Hopefully we'll get to a point where everybody is educated enough that we don't discriminate or hurt anyone, ever. Wouldn't that be nice?"

The Human Relations Commission also selected officers for the year, reelecting the same slate as last year with McAlister as chair, Hadley vice chair and Tony Schroeder as secretary.

Husband of Madison native killed in Arizona

BY THE COURIER STAFF

The husband of a Madison native was the victim of a murder-suicide on Tuesday, March 19, in the community of Tangerine Crossing in Marana, Arizona, according to a GoFundMe page established for the family.

The victim, David Brown, 58, had been married to Terri Lemm Brown, a 1978 graduate of Shawe Memorial High School, for almost 26 years and they had a son, Jacob.

According to a statement issued by the Marana Police Department, at approximately 11:40 a.m. on March 19, Marana Police responded to a report of a shooting in the 12000 block of Paseo Penuela.

Upon arrival, officers located a victim in his garage with obvious trauma consistent with gunshot wounds. Initial information provided by witnesses on scene indicated the victim was shot by a neighbor identified as Oscar Octavio Baca, 62, who was later found dead at his residence of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Memorial services for David Brown were Thursday, March 28, at New Life Bible Fellowship in Tucson, Arizona. Arrangements by Marana Mortuary & Cemetery in Marana, www.maranamortuarycemetery.com.

VMI notes concerns over potential night Christmas parade

BY BOB DEMAREE

Board members at Visit Madison Inc. revisited their concern over a possible move of Madison's annual Christmas parade from a daytime event to one at night as proposed by the Madison Parks and Recreation Department.

Hannah Mahoney, the city's communications director and a member of the VMI board of directors, reported at Monday's VMI meeting that the parks department, which puts on the parade, has indicated it wants to move forward with a night event but there are ongoing discussions and the decision is not finalized.

For many years the parade has been a middle-of-the-day event on the first Saturday in December. Moving the parade on that date to an evening event will conflict with the Nights Before Christmas Candlelight Tour of Homes. The tour, annually held the last weekend in November and first weekend in December, has in the past reported $1 million in economic impact on Jefferson County.

"Logistically, there are really concerns there" about the parade being moved to the same time as the tour of homes, said Andrew Forrester, VMI executive director, because it involves "shutting down Main Street when you have a lot of visitors trying to make it to a lot of houses to tour" including some tour homes that are routinely on Main Street..

Forrester said he is in favor "of doing something different" for the parade in which it could be at night "but just not on that weekend" when it conflicts with the tour. "We're having good dialogue with the parks department on it," he noted.

Mahoney said an online survey received 380 responses and "there's 10,000 people that come to the parade. We really don't think that's a good reflection of data." She also noted that only 14 Main Street businesses took the survey. "I was hoping the parks department would go and solicit the Main Street businesses to take the survey, and they have not yet."

She and Forrester have talked with representatives of Main Street businesses and "none of them were in favor of it." She said while a night parade is "a nice idea. I think it would be really pretty but I think we also have to think about our tourism."

She said while night parades have proven restaurants, ever since I was 14 years old. I'd also interned on a farm. So when I landed in Madison I was drawn toward the food business, and how I could express my interest in farm-to-table dining.

"I went out to Montana and worked on an organic produce farm for a year, then I came back to Madison and got a job at Rembrandt's Wine bar when I was about 20 years old. When Bob Maile first started Rembrandt's it was just serving wine, people might recall. But after a little while I approached Bob and offered to work up a food menu.

"Bob was open to trying, and he gave me complete freedom to build the food service the way I wanted. I started that from scratch, hired the staff, ran the food side, everything. We had a little garden behind the building where we would grow herbs and other ingredients. I think I averaged about 70 hours a week during those days!

"My next job was the garden manager at Lanthier Winery, all those flowers and plantings that surround the buildings down there by the river. Around that same time I started bartending some at Red Bicycle Hall and Off Broadway Taproom. It wasn't long before I was cooking in the kitchen at the Taproom. And that's when things started to get really interesting.

"Eventually I worked my way up to kitchen manager, and I asked Ryan if I could revamp the menu. He's very hands off about that kind of thing, and again, just like Bob at Rembrandt's, I was given complete freedom."

Now, if you're like me and you've been a long-time habitue of the Taproom, and JoeyG's before that, you'll have a very vivid memory of that moment five years ago when Gabby took full control of the food and started to impress her vision on the dining experience. All of a sudden, the food was original and fresh and playful and oh so flavorful. All of a sudden, something very special was happening at our favorite little watering hole!

"When it comes to food, I just want to be adventuresome and original," continues Gabby. "My approach is, Let's just try it! It almost always results in something fun and new and delicious.

I like food to be bright and colorful. I look for complementary flavors between savory and sweet. And presentation is super important.

"One of my other guiding principles is freshness and locally sourced ingredients. Any time I can go from the farm right to the table, that's a plus on so many levels. All our burgers are Indiana-grown beef. We get our eggs from Nightfall Farm over in Crothersville. Jesse Ernst supplies a lot of produce in season. And Valley Spirit Farm over in Campbellsburg, Kentucky, has been a great source.

"As with anything as big and involved as running a restaurant, it's not something you can do alone. I have a great crew and I couldn't do it without them. I ask every one of them, do you love good food, and do you want to grow with me? That's what matters most. I'm especially grateful for my right and left hand guys, Nicholas Stitzel who's been with me for seen years. And Cameron Gandee, who's been with me for six.

"As for the future, there's a lot more we can do at the Taproom, the sky's the limit really. But we are also working on getting the Broadway Tavern back open sometime this year. The menu is solidified there, and it's going to have a big emphasis on fresh, scratch made dishes. It will be another fine dining option in Madison, so that's very exciting.

"And there's even one more secret project in the works that I can't really say anything about, except to say it will be cool and weird and so much fun!"

If you'd like to keep up on Gabby's eclectic and amazing food journey, she's very active on Instagram, posting photos of her latest creations for the Taproom menu. Just go to off. broadway.taproom to keep up with all the colorful excitement.

successful in other communities, Madison is so unique. I don't want to say I'm for or against it. I think it's a great idea. I think we do need to rethink the Christmas parade."

Forrester reiterated that he is not opposed to exploring the night parade on a different weekend. "It gives us something different to market, but the other thing is there are a lot of other communities that have night parades that first Saturday in December. If we do that, we're competing with Columbus and North Vernon" that have night parades on the same day. If Madison does move forward with a night Christmas parade, he thinks maybe it would be best if the parade is moved to a different weekend. "I'm all for spacing things out and not cramming it into one weekend because then we get people here more weekends than just one," he said.

"This is something we're having dialogue about. I appreciate the city exploring the dialogue with us," said Forrester.

Innkeeper's tax increase next faces County Council consideration

BY BOB DEMAREE

Now that the Indiana General Assembly has passed legislation allowing Jefferson County to increase its innkeeper's tax, approval must still be given by the Jefferson County Council.

Visit Madison Inc. (VMI) Executive Director Andrew Forrester said at Monday's board of directors meeting that he doesn't expect the innkeeper's tax increase to come before County Council for at least a couple of months.

The legislation — Senate Bill 238 — authorizes Jefferson County to impose its innkeeper's tax at a rate of up to 8% instead of 5% as under current law. It was adopted by the Indiana General Assembly on March 8, signed by Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb on March 13, and was effective upon passage to allow consideration by the County Council. The legislation provides that the "portion of the tax rate that exceeds 5% shall expire Dec. 31, 2045."

The Jefferson County innkeepers tax was created in 1981 at 4% and was increased in 1987 to 5% with no additional changes in the last 35 years.

Jim Bartlett, a member of the Jefferson County Board of Tourism (JCBT) and the VMI board, said he would recommend that the County Council increase to 8%. "I don't see any reason we would stair-step" the increase. "I think we should do one step, and take it to 8%, but that's my personal opinion."

Forrester will join JCBT board members in recommending the increase at a future County Council meeting. "Ultimately, the decision boils down to County Council and making sure County Council is comfortable with the steps," he said.

Bartlett said that even if County Council approves the innkeeper's tax increase, there is uncertainty on when the increase will go into effect. Whatever that date could be, Bartlett said it "will undoubtedly be a little bit messy because a lot of people already have reservations, in some cases two years out, so we'll have to figure that out."

VMI President Jeff Frazier said implementation of the tax might need input from those who are renting rooms. Forrester wants to plan sessions to inform and educate "what this means for local hoteliers and what will change."

The innkeeper's tax increase was sought by the Jefferson County Board of Tourism. Forrester, Bartlett and JCBT President Trevor Crafton all met with state legislators to explain the need for the tax increase and ask for their support.

Public hearing delayed on proposed subdivision in Hanover

BY BOB DEMAREE

A public hearing for a proposed subdivision on 16.31 acres at 151 Kuntz Road in Hanover was tabled at Tuesday's Hanover Plan Commission meeting.

The purpose of the public hearing was to review the construction plans and final plat for the proposed Three Bends subdivision being sought by Hanover Mobile Village Corporation, owner of the development.

Hanover Town Council hired Jacobi, Toombs and Lanz Engineers (JTL) of New Albany, Indiana, to review the plans on behalf of the town. However, with the plan commission meeting scheduled at 5:30 p.m., JTL representatives called at 4 p.m. that day to say the review of plans was still not been completed.

"It's unfortunate" that the matter had to be tabled, said Ken Kraus Jr., president of the Plan Commission. "We'll get there."

Treva Shelton, a member of the plan commission and the town council, noted it is important that everyone is comfortable with the plans. "We want it to be right," she said.

After that meeting, the Board of Zoning Appeals met to consider a variance for sidewalks at the proposed Three Bends subdivision, and that matter was also tabled for the same reason.

In other business, the BZA elected its officers for 2024 with Ken Degler as president, Kraus vice president and Kathi Scroggins secretary.

Avoid Identity Theft; Learn How to Recognize Phishing Scams

Layin' it on the line

Learn how to identify and recognize phishing scams

Simply ask for it. That's the easiest way for an identity thief to steal your personal information.

People fall victim to phishing scams daily through emails, texts, or phone calls and mistakenly turn over important data. In turn, cybercriminals try to use that data to file fraudulent tax returns or commit other crimes.

The Internal Revenue Service, state tax agencies, and the tax industry — all partners in the fight against identity theft — urge you to learn to recognize and avoid phishing scams.

We need your help in the fight against identity theft. That's why, as part of the Security Summit effort, we launched a public awareness campaign called Taxes. Security. Together. We've launched a series of security awareness tips that can help protect you from cybercriminals. It's called "phishing" because thieves attempt to lure you into the scam mainly through impersonations. The scam may be from a friend, a company with whom you do business, a prize award – anything to get you to open the email or text.

A good general rule: Don't give out personal information based on an unsolicited email request. Here are a few basic tips for recognizing and avoiding a phishing email:

The email offers a link to a spoofing site that may look similar to the legitimate official website. • It contains a link. Scammers often pose as the IRS, financial institutions, credit card companies, or even tax companies or software providers. They may claim they need you to update your account or ask you to change a password. Do not click on the link. If in doubt, go directly to the legitimate website and access your account. • It contains an attachment. Another option for scammers is to include an attachment to the email. This attachment may be infected with malware that can download malicious software onto your computer without your knowledge. If it's spyware, it can track your keystrokes to obtain information about your passwords, Social Security number, credit cards, or other sensitive data. Do not open attachments from sources unknown to you. • It's from a government agency. Scammers attempt to frighten people into opening email links by posing as government agencies. Thieves often try to imitate the IRS and other government agencies. • It's an "off" email from a friend. Scammers also hack email accounts and try to leverage stolen email addresses. You may receive an email from a "friend" that doesn't seem right. It may be missing a subject for the subject line or contain odd requests or language. If it seems off, avoid it, and do not click on any links. • It has a lookalike URL. The suspicious email may try to trick you with the URL. For example, instead of www.irs.gov, it may be a false lookalike such as www.irs.gov.maliciousname.com. You can place your cursor over the text to view a pop-up of the real URL. • Use security features. Make sure you use all of your security software features. Your browser and email provider generally will have anti-spam and phishing features.

Opening a phishing email and clicking on the link or attachment is one of the most common ways thieves cannot just steal your identity or personal information but also enter into computer networks and create other mischief.

Learning to recognize and avoid phishing emails – and sharing that knowledge with your family members – is critical to combating identity theft and data loss. Businesses should educate employees about the dangers.

The IRS, state tax agencies, and the tax industry joined the Security Summit to enact a series of initiatives to help protect you from tax-related identity theft in 2017. You can help by taking these basic steps.

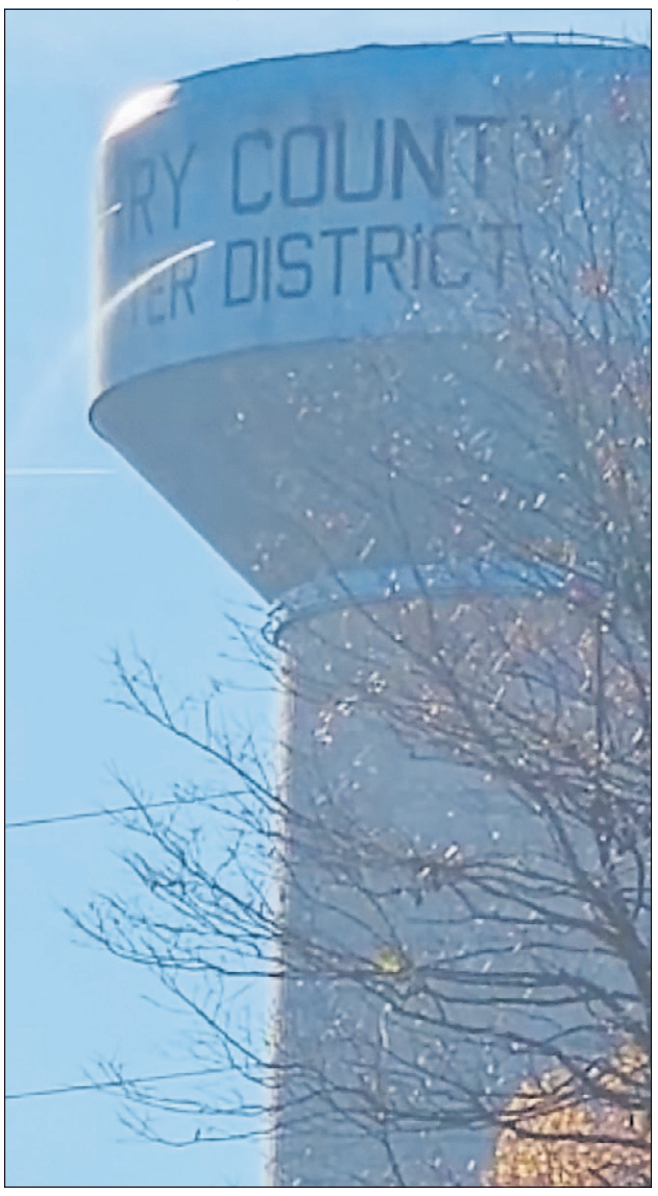
Reward offered in vandalism of Trimble County water tower

Sheriff's office, water district investigating shootings of tank

BY TAYLOR WILLIAMS
PAXTON MEDIA GROUP

The Trimble County Sheriff's Office is working with the Henry County Water District No. 2 to identify the person or persons responsible for the vandalism of a Trimble County water tower twice in 2023 by offering a $500 reward for information leading to an arrest in the case.

The tower, located along U.S. 42 between Bedford and Sligo, is owned by Henry County Water District No. 2 but serves customers in Trimble County. Police say the massive storage tower was vandalized twice in 2023 when shots from a high-powered rife pierced the half-inch steel tank causing it to leak until repairs could be made.



Henry County Water District

A screen capture of a Henry County Water District No. 2 video of its tank located along U.S. 42 in Trimble County leaking after allegedly being shot by a high-powered rifle twice in 2023.

According to Trimble Sheriff Charles Kelton, the first damage was discovered on Jan. 24, 2023, when the tower was obviously shot with a high-powered rifle. The tower was vandalized again in a second shooting on Nov. 6, 2023. Both incidents left the tower streaming water from near its top.

The incidents resulted in an extreme amount of water being lost until repairs could be made by patching the tower from the outside. Kelton said repairs cost $10,000 to $15,000, so based on the vandalism and cost of repairs the person responsible is facing serious charges.

The sheriff's office was alerted both times when neighbors from a surrounding subdivision reported seeing water leaking from the tower. Kentucky State Police took the initial reports on the damages but the sheriff's office and water district are also investigating.

Kelton suspects that both incidents are by the same shooter based on the location, angle of the shot and that the same side was shot each time.

"Both times it happened was on the same side of the water tower, which is the north-west side," Kelton said. "The steel for those things is a half-inch thick, so it takes a very large caliber rifle to shoot from that distance to penetrate it."

Kelton said despite having a good idea of the angle and direction of the shots, police have developed no strong suspect in the case. "All we have is the direction the bullet came from," he said. "It's a hard case to solve because … there are rifles that can shoot a long distance and they could be sitting anywhere and shoot that thing."

Kelton has contacted the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) to see if they can assist with the case with records on ballistics and trajectory that might help identify the caliber and range of the weapon used, but little information was found that helped in the investigation.

To help encourage anyone with information to come forward, the Henry County Water District's board agreed to offer a small reward for information. "They want to solve it because they want to hold somebody accountable for the … repairs they've had to do," Kelton said.

Details of the $500 reward were posted on Facebook on Feb. 14, 2024. Kelton is hopeful that someone will come forward with information linking someone to the crime. He also hopes that when the water company next drains the tower to conduct maintenance, they will be able to find the bullets that penetrated the tower and recover them to hopefully help in the investigation.

Until the bullets are recovered, Kelton said the investigation is relying solely on word-of-mouth and "so far, it's been quiet ... It'd be nice to figure out who's participating in such … activities."

Kelton believes that planned maintenance will take place in April and he hopes the bullets can be recovered when the tower is drained and patched from the inside. "They'll repair the inside skin of the water tower this time because they've only got the outside done right now," Kelton noted.

Kelton said the 2023 incidents mark the first time in his 25 year career that a water tower has been shot twice in one year. He said towers have been vandalized by spray paint in the past, but this is the first time a tower has been damaged in a way that impacts its performance for customers.

In order to ensure that there won't be any other acts of vandalism, Kelton said the water district is currently working to install security cameras at and around the site. The cameras will cover the roadway in front of the water tower and be able to monitor comings and goings in front of the tower.

Meanwhile, if anyone has any information in the case, contact Kelton at 502-225-7138 or by email at c.kelton@trimblesheriff.org or the water district at 502-532-6279. Kelton said all information provided will remain anonymous.

AWARDS

"no-brainer … It's going to help Chautauqua. It's going to help Ribberfest. It's going to help Regatta. It's going to help MadHop. It's going to help different festivals that are here in Jefferson County. It's needed," Crafton said. "I'm not saying it's a long-term solution but it's a waterproof Band-Aid for right now" in addressing WiFi problems that have existed during festivals in recent years.

There had been a request of $3,000 for a short film project, "Andodynos" but only $1,000 was awarded. The "Anodynos" short film project is one being done by Madison natives Alec Lichlyter and Luke Fisher. The film will focus on issues of loneliness and reintegration for those in the military to civilian life in the face of the opioid epidemic. It will be filmed on location for four days in Madison during November. The JCBT grant would pay for location costs, hotel costs and lunches for cast and crew on filming days. Crafton said he believes that the remainder of the request can be funding through private donations. "We believe in veterans and their mental health, and we'd like to help with that gap," he said.

Two applications were not funded. A request of $50,000 for Main Street Comfort Station improvements was tabled. VMI has hopes of putting a permanent satellite welcome center there, which had a successful test run last fall. "We think there are a lot of moving parts right now so we're going to table it," Crafton said.

The other application not funded was a $10,000 request by MadTix, a local ticketing platform. Crafton told MadTix owner Alex Helton that she is an "amazing entrepreneur and we appreciate everything you're doing in the community" but "we just couldn't wrap our mind around that right now in this grant cycle."

Board member Jim Bartlett said, "I want to make a point of congratulating every group that is represented here. All of these projects are good projects and I'm absolutely impressed by the number of people in our community that are represented by these projects — a number of folks that are largely volunteer driven that are involved in making tourism in Jefferson County and Madison work. It's just absolutely amazing, and if you look at those numbers I think you will agree that puts Madison as one of the top volunteer communities in the nation on a per capita basis. Everybody here regardless of the results of these grants, everybody here is doing good work, and absolutely want to congratulate each and every one of you for the work you're doing."

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Southwestern baseball opened the 2024 season with two impressive wins over Henryville and Charlestown this week.

On Monday, the Rebels rocked Henryville 20-1 on the road. Southwestern collected only eight hits in the game but five were for extra bases including home runs by Adam Traylor and Jamison Lewis.

The game was relatively close until Southwestern pushed 14 runs across in the fourth inning to blow open the game.

Traylor had a monster game at the plate, going 4-for-4 with the home run, a double, seven RBIs and three runs scored. Lewis was 2-for-2 with the homer, three RBIs and four runs scored, Brady Cook had a double and two RBIs and Baron Welsh had a double and scored three runs.

Meanwhile, Lewis was dominate on the mound, allowing just one run on one hit in five innings with 11 strikeouts and three walks for the win.

Southwestern followed that win with a 4-1 victory over Charlestown on Wednesday at home.

The Rebels got an RBI single from Braxton Lewis and a steal of home from Brady Cook to take a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning and then scored on a squeeze play by Traylor and a bases-loaded walk in the fifth for a pair of insurance runs.

Jamison Lewis went 2-for-4 while Braxton Lewis had two RBIs and William Stockdale had a hit and scored a run.

Traylor picked up the win after throwing four shutout innings with five strikeouts and Stockdale struck out six in three innings for the save.

Southwestern, now 2-0 on the season, travels to Indianapolis on Saturday for a round-robin at Roncalli where the Rebels play host Roncalli and Gibson Southern. Southwestern then travels to Hauser on Monday and visits Class 3A No. 4 Silver Creek on Tuesday.

Calipari will return as UK's coach

Kentucky athletic director says despite growing fan discontent

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky athletic director Mitch Barnhart confirmed on social media that John Calipari will return as men's basketball coach despite calls for his firing following the Wildcats' third consecutive early exit from the NCAA Tournament.

John Calipari

Barnhart posted Tuesday night on X, formerly known as Twitter, that he and the Hall of Fame coach have talked about the direction of the men's program. He posted: "I can confirm that he will return for his 16th season as our head coach."

"We've got to first of all see who's going to be here from this roster. And who won't be here."

— John Calipari
Kentucky basketball coach

Kentucky was seeded third in March Madness, but fell 80-76 to No. 14 seed Oakland in the first round on Thursday. This latest loss in Pittsburgh came a year after the Wildcats were ousted in the second round, and two years after they were upset as a No. 2 seed by 15th-seeded Saint Peter's in their NCAA opener.

Kentucky's quick exit drew immediate calls for Calipari's firing on sports talk shows and social media, with many criticizing his reliance on so-called "one and done" freshmen and Kentucky's defensive weaknesses. Calipari's dismissal would've triggered a $33 million buyout under terms of a lifetime contract signed in 2019.

The coach, for his part, sounded like someone intending to return during his season-ending radio show Monday night as he reiterated his love for players and the state. He also hinted at retaining his roster combination of talented freshmen and experienced players through the NCAA transfer portal — albeit with more beef.

"We've just got to get the right transfer," he said. "We've got to keep coaching these young kids. We've probably got to use the summer a little bit different because of where this has all gone. We've got to get more physicality, more time in the weight room. ... But on top of that, we've got to first of all see who's going to be here from this roster. And who won't be here."

U of L tabs Kelsey as next coach

BY GARY B. GRAVES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville has reached an agreement with College of Charleston coach Pat Kelsey to become the Cardinals' next men's basketball coach, a person with direct knowledge of the situation told The Associated Press.

Pat Kelsey

The person spoke Wednesday on the condition of anonymity because the deal has not been formally approved. Louisville has scheduled a news conference for Thursday at its practice facility.

Jeff Goodman of Field of 68 first reported the hire.

Kenny Payne, a first-time head coach, was fired by Louisville on March 13 after going 12-52 the last two seasons at his alma mater. It marked the worst two-year stretch in the storied program's history and capped its third consecutive losing season after missing the NCAA Tournament in 2021.

The 48-year-old Kelsey will become Louisville's third head coach, and fifth overall, since the school fired Hall of Famer Rick Pitino in October 2017 in the wake of a federal investigation of corruption in college basketball. It's the second men's basketball hire for Cardinals athletic director Josh Heird, and after the disastrous results under Payne, brings higher expectations of returning to relevancy.

But unlike Payne, Kelsey brings experience and a record of coaching success at Charleston and Winthrop.

He was named Colonial Athletic Association coach of the year this past season after guiding the Cougars to a 27-8 record and their second consecutive NCAA Tournament appearance. They lost to fourth-seeded Alabama 109-96 in last week's first round as the No. 13 seed.

Kelsey is 74-27 in three seasons with Charleston, which won consecutive CAA regular-season and tournament championships and automatic NCAA bids. His 2022-23 squad was 31-4 and ranked as high as 18th in the AP Top 25.

He's 261-122 over 12 seasons as coach at Charleston and Winthrop, which won four Big South Conference regular-season titles and three tournament crowns from 2016-2021. Kelsey previously worked as a Wake Forest assistant and Xavier associate head coach.

Several names had emerged as possible candidates since Payne's firing. The list included Baylor's Scott Drew and Florida Atlantic's Dusty May, who accepted the job at Michigan over the weekend. New Mexico's Richard Pitino, son of former longtime Cardinals coach Rick Pitino, Seton Hall's Shaheen Holloway and Indiana State's Josh Schertz emerged in recent days as targets.

Brooks named Kentucky women's hoops coach

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky hired Kenny Brooks as women's basketball coach after a successful tenure with Virginia Tech highlighted by the ACC regular season championship a year after winning the tournament title and reaching its first Final Four.

Kenny Brooks

The school announced Brooks' hiring on Tuesday afternoon, hours after Virginia Tech said he would leave the program. Kentucky will introduce Brooks as its ninth coach on Thursday afternoon.

Kentucky athletic director Mitch Barnhart said in a statement the school was "extremely excited" to bring Brooks aboard and cited his past success developing players at James Madison and Virginia Tech while guiding both programs to success.

"When you combine his coaching excellence with his vision for this program and his passion to take us there, he is ideally suited to be head coach of the Wildcats," Barnhart said.

Brooks thanked Virginia Tech "for the most joyful journey" of his coaching career and expressed excitement in coming to Kentucky and competing in the Southeastern Conference.

"I don't plan on wasting any time building a positive atmosphere, winning environment and a persistent program that Big Blue Nation can be proud of," Brooks said.

Brooks will follow Kyra Elzy at Kentucky. She was fired March 11 after consecutive losing seasons since winning the school's first Southeastern Conference Tournament title since 1982.

Earlier Tuesday, Virginia Tech athletic director Whit Babcock wished Brooks and his family well and called him "an incredible mentor" to the program and a terrific representative of the school.

The Waynesboro, Virginia, native went 180-82 with at least 20 wins in seven of his eight seasons in Blacksburg, leading the Hokies to their first Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament title last year before winning the 2024 regular season title. Virginia Tech won a school-record 31 games last season on the way to its Final Four appearance before falling to eventual national champion LSU.

The Hokies (25-7) were seeded fourth in their fourth consecutive NCAA Tournament and reached the second round before falling 75-72 to No. 5 seed Baylor on Sunday.

"We hired Kenny in 2016 with the intent of revitalizing our women's basketball program," Babcock said. "Needless to say, Kenny, his staff and student-athletes created a culture of excellence on and off the court."

Babcock added that the school will begin a national search for Brooks' replacement immediately.

Brooks went 337-122 at James Madison and was the Dukes' winningest coach, leading them to 11 consecutive postseason appearances with six NCAA berths and five WNIT appearances. JMU went 60-3 in Colonial Athletic Association play during his final three seasons at the school in Harrisonburg, Virginia.

Bracket not busted: Top 8 seeds all advance to Sweet 16

BY JOHN MARSHALL
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

March Madness arrived with visions of chaos. Based on last year's bracket, there was little reason to doubt it.

The only surprise so far has been the lack of pandemonium.

The top two seeds from each region are headed to the Sweet 16 for just the fifth time. One double-digit seed will join them. Most of the Cinderellas that put the madness in March busted out of the bracket long before midnight.

The bluebloods and big boys — many of them, anyway — are going to the regionals and they all want more.

"I didn't come back to make the Sweet 16," Purdue big man Zach Edey said after the Boilermakers' 106-67 victory over Utah State. "I came back to make a run, a deep run. Nobody is satisfied with where we are now."

Last year's Final Four was unlike any other, a bracket-busting foursome with no teams seeded better than No. 4 for the first time since the bracket expanded in 1979.

Reigning national champion UConn has looked good in its bid to repeat this year, but there wasn't a dominant team during the regular season, opening the door for what was expected to be a wild NCAA Tournament.

It didn't happen.

The upsets that punctuate March have been limited — 13-seed Yale and 12-seeds James Madison and Grand Canyon and 14th-seeded Oakland are all headed home. The only true buzzer-beater was a tying 3-pointer by Texas A&M's Andersson Garcia to force overtime against Houston. The average margin of victory the first two rounds was 15.8 points, second-highest since 1985.

Purdue erased some of the disappointment of last year's first-round flameout with a pair of lopsided wins, setting up a Sweet 16 matchup with a Gonzaga team back in the underdog role. Fellow No. 1 seeds North Carolina, UConn and Houston also are through.

The Cougars were the only ones tested, needing overtime to beat Texas A&M 100-95. No other game involving a No. 1 seed was closer than 16 points.

"I didn't come back to make the Sweet 16. I came back to make a run, a deep run. Nobody is satisfied with where we are now."

— Zach Edey
Purdue basketball player

No. 2 seeds Arizona, Tennessee, Marquette and Iowa State also advanced, marking the fifth time — first since 2019 — that all eight top-two seeds reached the Sweet 16 since the start of seeding in 1979.

Also in are No. 3 seeds Illinois and Creighton, along with fourth-seeded Duke and Alabama. The average seed for the Sweet 16 is a chalky 3.3, right behind the 3.1 in 2019 and 2009.

DOUBLE-DIGIT SEEDS

Oakland's Jack Gohlke took the first big star turn of the NCAA Tournament, pouring in 10 3-pointers — second-most ever — in the 14th-seeded Golden Grizzlies' upset win over No. 3 seed Kentucky. Gohlke hit six more 3s against N.C. State, but the Wolfpack outlasted Oakland in overtime to reach the Sweet 16 for the first time since 2015.

That leaves No. 11 seed N.C. State, which had to win the ACC tournament just to get into the bracket, as the only double-digit seed left after San Diego State blew out No. 13 Yale in the final game of the second round.

"I think that's what March is about," N.C. State big man DJ Burns said. "Some teams got here by winning their conference just like us and that doesn't mean they're a bad team."

POWERHOUSE ACC

The ACC had what was considered a down year with just five teams making the NCAA Tournament.

Virginia bowed out in the First Four, but top-seeded North Carolina, Duke, Clemson and N.C. State are all through to the Sweet 16, giving the ACC a sparkling 8-1 record through the first two rounds.

The ACC is the sixth league to get four teams through to the Sweet 16 since the NCAA Tournament expanded in 1985. The Big East was the last to do it, in 2003.

BIG EAST BEAST

Big East coaches, players and fans were frustrated with the bracket reveal when just three teams made it into the bracket.

The league is rolling so far with three teams getting through to the Sweet 16 and a 6-0 record.

UConn is looking good in its bid to become the first repeat champion since Florida in 2006-07, winning its first two games by an average of 28 points.

Marquette ended its early-exit woes, reaching the Sweet 16 for the first time since 2016. Creighton is also into the regional round after coming within seconds of reaching the Final Four a year ago.

"You've see how other leagues that got the bids that our league deserved has underperformed," UConn coach Dan Hurley said. "Obviously the mistake was made. It sucks."

BIG RATINGS

The limited buzzer beaters and lack of Cinderella runs haven't squashed interest in this year's NCAA Tournament.

The NCAA said the first round on Thursday averaged a record 8.5 million viewers across CBS and the Turner channels and Friday's games drew 8.6 million, second-most ever. Interest climbed even more for Saturday's second-round games, averaging 10.8 million viewers, another record.

DeRozan, Vucevic lead Bulls past Pacers

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — DeMar DeRozan scored 27 points and Nikola Vucevic added 22 with 12 rebounds to lead the Chicago Bulls past the Indiana Pacers 125-99 on Wednesday night to snap a three-game skid.

Coby White had 18 points to help Chicago take the season series from Indiana 3-1.

Andrew Nembhard scored 18 points for the Pacers, who concluded a five-game trip at 3-2 and remained in sixth place in the Eastern Conference.

Chicago limited Pascal Siakam to 14 points after the two-time All-Star had scored 25 or more in four straight games and 36 and 31 in his last two, respectively. The Pacers were held to 40% shooting, while the Bulls shot 50% in an often sloppy game.

Ayo Dosunmu scored 17 on 7-for-11 shooting, including 3 for 5 on 3-pointers. Andre Drummond added 14 points and 11 rebounds off the bench for Chicago, ninth in the East.

The Bulls took charge late in the second quarter by outscoring and outmuscling the Pacers 22-6 in the final 6:24 to build a 64-43 halftime lead. Chicago shot 55.6%, while Indiana lagged at 35% in the first half.

Vucevic led the way with 15 points in the half and helped spark the surge with 7-for-11 shooting. Dosunmu had 11 points in the half.

Indiana scored the first seven points in the second half to start a comeback that narrowed the Bulls' lead to 71-64 with just over four minutes left in the third quarter when T.J. McConnell hit a pair of free throws. The Pacers didn't pull closer than seven, however.

DeRozan, Drummond and Dosunmu helped thwart the Pacers with timely baskets that wrested back momentum late in the third and made it 87-74 after the quarter.

Chicago pulled away in the fourth.

Bulls coach Billy Donovan said injured Zach LaVine (right foot surgery), Patrick Williams (left foot surgery) and Lonzo Ball (left knee surgery) could be in Chicago on Monday when the Bulls host Atlanta, then continue rehabbing in town with the team the rest of the season.

Holmes ignites late rally to push Indiana past Oklahoma 75-68

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLOOMINGTON — Approaching the end of her stellar playing career at Indiana, Mackenzie Holmes put together an appropriate finish to her final game at Assembly Hall.

In the waning minutes Monday night, Holmes demanded the ball. And the two-time All-American delivered.

She scored 29 points, including six straight during a crucial stretch late in the game, and No. 4 seed Indiana topped fifth-seeded Oklahoma 75-68 in the second round of the NCAA Tournament.

Moments after the Hoosiers improved to 17-0 at home this season, Holmes ran into the stands to celebrate with the fans.

"I did that a couple years back when we beat Princeton to get to the Sweet 16," she said, beaming with a smile. "This is my last game in Assembly Hall, I just really wanted to take it all in, so I asked coach (Teri Moren) if it was OK, and she gave me the go ahead. So we just went for it."

Now, instead of bemoaning a surprising exit from March Madness, Holmes and her teammates advanced to a matchup with undefeated South Carolina in Albany, New York.

Even if Holmes' college career ends later this week, this send-off seemed like a fitting tribute for a player who overcame multiple knee injuries to help the Hoosiers emerge as a national power.

Sydney Parish added 17 points, eight rebounds and five assists for the Hoosiers (26-5), who are in the Sweet 16 for the second time in three years, erasing the bitter memories of last year's second-round exit to Miami.

That loss motivated Indiana all season.

"I didn't want to end this game with a loss, I couldn't let it happen again," Holmes said after career win No. 123. "We all knew how it felt last year and I was going to do everything in my power not to let that happen again.

Big 12 Player of the Year Skylar Vann led the Sooners (23-10) with 20 points and eight rebounds. Aubrey Joens had 16 points for Oklahoma, which walked off the floor dejectedly following a fourth consecutive second-round loss in the NCAA Tournament.

"I don't really think it's the end of the story," Oklahoma coach Jennie Baranczyk said. "If this can really fuel this team (next season), then this might be one of those situations where it's not never but maybe it's more of a not yet."

The Hoosiers can empathize with such a sentiment now that they have emerged from a nerve-racking tourney game.

More than 12,000 fans in Assembly Hall roared loudly in the closing minutes as the Hoosiers finally took control. When the final buzzer sounded, the music blared and fans and Indiana players pumped their arms in the air.

It was quite a postgame party.

For much of the night, though, it looked as if the Hoosiers might be staring at the sequel.

Again, they ran into a lower-seeded team that appeared athletic and more physical. This time, though, they fought back and surged ahead thanks to Holmes' post play.

The Hoosiers tied the score on Holmes' layup to open the fourth. She inadvertently hit Vann with an elbow in the nose on the play. From that point, it remained a one-possession game until Holmes' scoring flurry gave Indiana a 66-64 lead with 1:18 to go.

An Oklahoma turnover on the ensuing possession led to a 10-footer from Yarden Garzon, Holmes came up with a steal and the Hoosiers closed it out at the free-throw line.

"It's bothered us, it really has," Moren acknowledged, referring to the Miami game. "If that gave them some extra it very well could have. Selfishly, I wanted Mack and Sara (Scalia) and Arielle (Wisne) win their last game in The Hall. To be able to do it and go to a Sweet 16 makes it even sweeter."

BIG PICTURE

Oklahoma: The Sooners have been to 22 NCAA Tournaments since the turn of the century but they have not been to a Sweet 16 since 2013.

Indiana: The Hoosiers spent all season trying to right the disappointment from that second-round exit in Grace Berger's career finale. It looked like it might happen again, but they dug deep late and pulled this one out — and now face a more daunting test later this week.

Clark, Iowa draw nearly 5M viewers for 2nd-round win

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRISTOL, Conn. — It didn't take long for Caitlin Clark and the Iowa Hawkeyes to break their viewing record in the women's NCAA Tournament.

The Hawkeyes' 64-54 victory over West Virginia in Monday night's second-round game averaged 4.90 million viewers on ESPN, according to Nielsen, making it the most-viewed women's tournament game ever — excluding Final Four contests and title games.

The viewership surpassed the 3.23 million who watched Iowa's first-round win over Holy Cross on Saturday on ABC.

Monday night's game is also the most-watched NCAA Tournament game — men's or women's — on cable this year. The previous high was 4.09 million for Houston's overtime victory over Texas A&M Sunday night on TNT.

It was the fourth Iowa women's game this season, and first one on cable, where the viewer average was over 3 million. The others were on Fox, CBS and ABC.

Iowa's Albany 2 Regional semifinal game against Colorado will be on ABC on Saturday afternoon. It should draw another large audience, especially with both men's regional finals not tipping off until the evening.

According to ESPN, Sunday and Monday's second-round games averaged 1.4 million, a 121% increase over last year.

LSU's rally over Middle Tennessee drew 2 million on Sunday on ABC.

UConn's victory over Syracuse, which preceded the Iowa game on ESPN, averaged 2.1 million. Southern California's win over Kansas, which followed Iowa, had 1.8 million.

Transfer portal, NIL challenges teams to fill, maintain rosters, even as March Madness continues

BY GARY B. GRAVES

Morehead State head coach Preston Spradlin yells to his team March 21 as they played against Illinois in the first half of a first-round college basketball game in the NCAA Tournament in Omaha, Neb.

LOUISVILLE — Morehead State coach Preston Spradlin wasn't surprised when several players from his 2021 March Madness team eventually took their talents elsewhere, with a couple landing at Power Five programs.

The Eagles' return to this year's NCAA Tournament shows he didn't panic. Even though the Ohio Valley Conference school tucked in the eastern Kentucky mountains lacks the flashy profile and deep resources that larger programs can offer — especially when it comes to name, image and likeness (NIL) — Spradlin worked the transfer portal to his advantage by selling small-school virtues along with a successful resume.

"We've had some guys who played at the Power Five level that have come down because they wanted a bigger role and wanted to experience playing more and all those types of things," the eighth-year coach said the day after Selection Sunday. "So yeah, there's give and take both ways and it works in both directions."

No matter the level, the transfer portal that opened March 18 presents basketball programs with the dual challenge to fill roster vacancies and prevent their own players from leaving and deepening the vast pool of talent. That's been an ongoing obstacle for sure, perhaps more so in an era of expanded movement with the one-time transfer exception and the extra year of eligibility granted during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Though the numbers taking advantage of the extra year is expected to drop in 2025 as players complete eligibility, the portal remains a free-for-all with the pool already at more than 750 Division I men and nearly 600 D-I women as NCAA Sweet 16 action resumed on Thursday.

Clemson guard Joseph Girard III, who transferred from Syracuse after Hall of Fame coach Jim Boeheim retired, said there are pros and cons and the portal is a good second chance for players whose decisions in high school didn't pan out as expected. South Carolina women's coach Dawn Staley has also turned over the top-ranked Gamecocks roster after departures of several veterans and acknowledged that the portal's presence requires relationship building.

"If you don't have a strong staff and a strong connection with your team, it gets hard because, you know, you're thinking about who is going to jump in the portal, how you prep for the NCAA Tournament," she said.

For schools from lower-profile conferences, the so-called mid-majors, keeping players from seeking greener pastures at bigger schools is even tougher. Especially when the big teams can sweeten the pot with lucrative NIL opportunities along with more exposure on the bigger stage.

"It's a different game than what it's been," said Dayton men's coach Anthony Grant, who wondered about NIL and the influence of agents and sponsors involved with players.

"I think the beauty of college athletics has always been the ability to bring a team together and grow a team together. … As a coach, you begin to question if that piece of it can remain a part of the game. Whether it's basketball or football, or really any sport, I think that's in the balance right now."

Though the portal's opening right after Selection Sunday gave schools who aren't playing in the postseason an initial peek at who's available, many of the 68 men's and women's teams that began NCAA play last weekend had a bigger goal to focus on. That's the case with schools competing in lower-tier tournaments such as the NIT and CIT.

That doesn't mean coaches aren't looking. Recruiting never really stops. Although coaches, such as Nevada's Steve Alford, wish the window could have opened after the Final Four to allow tournament teams and their coaching staffs to enjoy the most important part of the season.

Added Longwood coach Griff Aldrech, "It's disappointing because you want to really enjoy and be present in this moment."

How it all shakes out remains to be seen.

Though the bigger schools at first glance figure to benefit by raiding rising talent from smaller school, there's also the chance for lateral movement among Power Five and mid-major members. Morehead State, for example, earned its second OVC title in four seasons with four players from mid-major schools along with a major NAIA addition in forward Riley Minix, who was one of Division I's top 10 scorers.

This despite losing forward Johni Broome to Auburn — where he became an All-Southeastern Conference selection — and guard Ta'Lon Cooper to South Carolina (after a one-year stopover at Minnesota) from the 2021 OVC title team. Both players helped their schools reach the Big Dance.

"The key is still figuring out what kind of players you want to build your program with," Spradlin said, "and then figuring out the best avenue to get those players. NIL has not necessarily been a factor for that."

Drexel women's coach Amy Mallon made it work the other way, filling the void left by the departure of No. 2 scorer Kylie Lavelle to Penn State by adding starting guard Amy Mallon from Villanova. Dragons leading scorer Amaris Baker transferred in from a junior college.

"We benefited," Mallon said.

And then there's Montana State, where six of eight new scholarship players came from other Division I schools. Like many student-athletes who change venues, they arrived with something to prove, and the destination mattered less than the opportunity.

While coach Matt Logie acknowledged the transfer portal and NIL are changing rapidly, the Bobcats made the tournament by sticking to two basic principles.

"Number one is player development," Logie said. "And the second part is team building. That's not just roster building. We've always taken great pride in the basketball family that I'm a part of in player development and team building. Once that process started in earnest in June, nothing was really different about our journey."

Reds 2B McLain has shoulder surgery

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati Reds second baseman Matt McLain had surgery on his left shoulder and will be sidelined for an extended period.

Reds president of baseball operations Nick Krall said the operation took place Tuesday to address cartilage damage and repair the labrum.

"An exact timeline is still TBD as it has a wide range of possibilities. We hope to have Matt back this season," Krall said in a statement Wednesday.

The 24-year-old McLain last played in a spring training game on March 17 and was hurt the following day while diving for a ball during a workout. Reds manager David Bell revealed the injury on March 20, the day Cincinnati acquired infielder Santiago Espinal from Toronto.

McLain hit. 290 with 16 homers, 50 RBIs and 14 stolen bases last year, finishing fifth in NL Rookie of the Year voting.

Cincinnati starts Thursday against Washington and also will be without third baseman Noelvi Marte, serving an 80-game suspension for testing positive for a performance-enhancing substance, and center fielder T.J. Friedl, who has a broken right wrist.

The 2021 NL Rookie of the Year Jonathan India could see time at first, second, third and left field after playing exclusively at second in his first three seasons.

NFL owners unanimously approve banning hip-drop tackle

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell addresses reporters Tuesday at the end of the NFL owners meetings in Orlando, Fla.

ORLANDO, Fla. — The NFL is eliminating the hip-drop tackle.

NFL team owners on Monday unanimously approved a rule that bans players from using a swivel technique to tackle an opponent.

A violation will result in a 15-yard penalty and could ultimately result in fines for players.

NFL executive Jeff Miller said the hip-drop tackle was used 230 times last season and resulted in 15 players missing time with injuries.

The NFL Players Association has adamantly opposed the rule.

"It doesn't get used very often, but when it is used, it's incredibly injurious to the runner," NFL Competition Committee chairman Rich McKay said. "The runner is purely defenseless. And I have heard defenders say it before, and I hear them, 'Hey, you're putting me in a really tough spot. You're saying I can't hit here. What do I do?' And my response has always been, 'Well, you can't do that, and that's just because the guy you're hitting is defenseless and has no way to protect himself.' So we've got to protect him and you've got to come up with other ways, and you know what, they do."

The league played a video during a news conference to show six specific plays in which the hip-drop tackle was used in games, with Bengals tight end Drew Sample, Cowboys running back Tony Pollard, Bengals receiver Tyler Boyd, Seahawks quarterback Geno Smith and Titans quarterback Ryan Tannehill all being on the receiving end of the now-illegal hit.

NFL teams will continue to receive videos showing illegal hits and ways to make tackles within the rules.

"It's a new rule, so they'll not have seen it," McKay said about officiating the penalty. "This is never practiced; nobody does this in practice. There's never a player that's going to use this tactic on a player on his own team in a practice so they're never going to see it. They're only going to see it in the game. We will tell them, 'Listen, this a penalty on the books. You can call it. You got to see all three elements of what's going on here. You got to see him grab him. You got to see him control them. You got to see him swivel himself up in the air and you got to see him go unweighted. You don't see it, don't call it.

"We're going to take all these tapes that you've seen. ... we're going to take them all to the clubs and show them: this is what we don't want. This is what a foul looks like."

A significant change to kickoffs wasn't presented for a vote but McKay said it's possible owners will consider it on Tuesday instead of waiting for the league meetings in May.

All rules proposals require 24 out of 32 votes for approval.

Only two other proposals were approved by owners.

Teams will now receive a third challenge following one successful challenge. Previously, teams had to be successful on two challenges to receive a third.

Also, if there is a double foul during a down in which there is a change or changes of possession, including if one of the fouls is a post-possession foul by a team during a scrimmage kick, the team last gaining possession will keep the ball after enforcement for its foul, provided it did not foul prior to last gaining possession.

McKay said there's urgency to vote on the complicated new kickoff rule this week because it could impact the way teams select players next month in the NFL draft.

"I like voting on it sooner rather than later because there's no question that bringing the play back, we had 1,970 touchbacks last season, so if you bring the play back in, let's just say that 1,200 of those become returns, the person you're going to have as a returner is going to matter more," McKay said. "And we do have a draft coming up. And we do have college free agency coming up. So I think personnel people need to know is this play going to be in or out, and that would lead me to want to have the vote sooner."

The new rule proposal takes elements of the kickoff rules used in spring leagues such as the XFL.

For a standard kickoff, the ball would be kicked from the 35-yard line with the 10 kick coverage players lined up at the opposing 40, with five on each side of the field.

The return team would have at least nine blockers lined up in the "set up zone" between the 30- and 35-yard line with at least seven of those players touching the 35. There would be up two returners allowed inside the 20.

Only the kicker and two returners would be allowed to move until the ball hits the ground or was touched by a returner inside the 20.

Any kick that reaches the end zone in the air can be returned, or the receiving team can opt for a touchback and possession at the 30. Any kick that reaches the end zone in the air and goes out of bounds or out of the end zone also would result in a touchback at the 30.

If a ball hits a returner or the ground before the end zone and goes into the end zone, a touchback would be at the 20 or the play could be returned. Any kick received in the field of play would have be returned.

Under current rules, any touchback — or if a returner calls for a fair catch in the field of play — results in the receiving team getting the ball at its 25.

"This is our chance to keep special teams in the game," McKay said. "Special teams has been a part of the game forever. And, if you lose the kickoff, in our mind, you really pretty much eliminated special teams and put it on a punt play. And so that's what we're trying to, get through and and figure out if we can get to 24 votes."

FLAG FOOTBALL

Three-time All-Pro wide receiver DeAndre Hopkins, who came to the meetings to promote flag football, hopes to play the sport in the Olympics after he retires.

Flag Football was approved for the 2028 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles last year. Several NFL players have expressed excitement about possibly competing in the sport.

"We've heard the players speak out about it," NFL executive Troy Vincent said. "We have good models in other sports on participation. ... The way the schedule is, it may not conflict with, let's say training camp or potentially regular season, but we are working with the (NFL) Players Association. We've had really, really productive, conversations about it. And who really wants to get in the way? Just to be frank, who wants to get in the way of stopping the player from (representing) his country or her country? So we believe that will take place. But these guys, they talk about it, we hear them talk about it all the time. So we think that process will take its course."

GLOBAL EXPANSION

The NFL announced an expansion of its Global Markets Program, adding four new teams and five new markets set to participate. The program, which launched in 2022, awards NFL clubs international marketing rights to build brand awareness and fandom beyond the United States, through fan engagement, events and commercial opportunities. Overall, 25 clubs will participate in the program across 19 international markets, as the NFL continues to prioritize global growth.

The Cleveland Browns (Nigeria), Detroit Lions (Austria, Canada, Germany and Switzerland), Indianapolis Colts (Austria and Germany) and New York Giants (Germany) joined the program.

Byron win has Hendrick rolling toward team's 40th anniversary party

BY JIM VERTUNO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN, Texas — Hendrick Motorsports has a lot to be happy about as the team barrels toward its big 40th anniversary celebration in two weeks.

William Bryon dominated on Sunday in his second win of the NASCAR season, which came at the Circuit of the Americas. Alex Bowman earned his third top-four finish of 2024 at COTA, and Kyle Larson snatched a wild Xfinity Series win on Saturday.

That's quite a roll ahead of the team's planned celebrations for race weekend at Martinsville Speedway, where Hendrick Motorsports claimed its first win with Geoff Bodine in 1984 when it raced under the name All-Star Racing.

The racing so far has produced its own party.

Byron is the only two-time winner through the first six races of the season. The first came at the Daytona 500, where Bowman gave Hendrick a 1-2 finish at NASCAR's showcase race.

Byron's victory at COTA was career win No. 12 and his first from pole position.

"I mean, just watching him qualify, how smooth he was. Same thing throughout the race. Just seemed to put the car in all the right places," Hendrick Motorsports Vice Chairman Jeff Gordon said. "A lot of credit to William in doing that great job. Takes the whole team, the pit crew, everybody. They're truly on quite a run here to start this season off. Can't wait to see where they take it next."

The series moves to the short track at Richmond next week before Martinsville on April 7.

"We're going to shoot for the stars," said Byron's crew chief, Rudy Fogle.

Hendrick will want a good showing at Martinsville, where team cars will sport special red paint schemes, owner Rick Hendrick will drive the pace car and Bodine and Gordon will be the grand marshals.

A Hendrick driver has won a race at Martinsville each of the last four years. The teams' 28 overall Cup Series wins there are the most for the organization at any track on the circuit.

"Obviously Martinsville is big for the 40th anniversary," Bowman said.

Bowman won there in 2021 and has delivered big results in a season when he needed to. He hasn't won since 2022, had the last two seasons marred by injuries and missed the playoff in 2023.

"I don't want to say, 'Yeah, we're back here 100%,' but these last few weeks have been a step in the right direction," Bowman said.

"I'm personally working as hard as I've ever worked," he said. "This year, I'm all in in every aspect of everything, whether it's extra shifts in the (simulator), or correlating the tires, spending more time with the team or training in the gym."

Larson's Xfinity win was a surprise even after he took pole position. He had to start from the back because his team had to replace a broken brake rotor, but he managed to fight his way through and snatch the win in overtime.

Larson was the first driver in a NASCAR series to win the pole and the race but lead only one lap while doing so. His win was the first for Hendrick Motorsports in Xfinity since the team returned to the series in 2022.

The only blemish to Hendrick's big weekend was that Larson's 17th-place finish in Sunday's race dropped him out of the lead in the Cup Series standings. Larson is now fifth, just ahead of Bryon.

All four Hendrick drivers are in the top 11, but Joe Gibbs Racing drivers Martin Truex Jr. and Ty Gibbs are the new 1-2 in the season championship.

Cavs owner believes Mitchell will sign long-term extension

BY LARRY LAGE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT — Cavaliers owner Dan Gilbert believes All-Star guard Donovan Mitchell will sign a long-term contract to chase an NBA championship with Cleveland.

"We've been talking to him, sure, for the last couple of years about extending this contract," Gilbert said Thursday in an interview with The Associated Press. "We think he will extend. I think if you listen to him talk, he loves the city.

"He loves the situation in Cleveland because our players are very young and we're just kind of putting the core together that he's clearly the biggest part of."

Mitchell, a 2013 first round pick out of Louisville by Utah, signed a five-year, $163 million contract in 2020 with Utah and is under contract through the 2026 season. Based on the NBA's collective bargaining agreement, Mitchell is eligible to sign a four-year extension worth up to roughly $200 million this summer.

Cleveland acquired him in a blockbuster trade shortly before the 2022-23 season. The team viewed him as perhaps the final piece to contend for an NBA championship by leading young stars Darius Garland, Evan Mobley and Jarrett Allen.

The 27-year-old Mitchell is averaging a team-high 27.4 points along with 6.1 assists and 5.3 rebounds while also leading Cavs off the court. However, he has been limited to 49 games due to injuries and hasn't played since March 16.

Mitchell missed his sixth straight game Wednesday night, a disappointing loss to lowly Charlotte. He may return this week.

Mitchell has often stated he likes playing in Cleveland and sees potential in a team with flaws but plenty of promise.

Cleveland returned to the playoffs a year ago, but the Cavs were eliminated in the first round by the New York Knicks in five games. Adding to the defeat is that it came against the team Mitchell grew up rooting for and with whom he's been long linked.

Of course, the Cavs have gone down this path before with LeBron James, who left as a free agent in 2010 before returning after four seasons in Miami to lead Cleveland to the 2016 title — the first major championship for a Cleveland team since 1964.

Today's Puzzle Solved

Sharing in-law unit causes problems

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: We are having an issue with our daughter and son-in-law regarding the use of a guesthouse. They live a day's drive from us, so when we visit, we like to stay for several days. We try to visit at least monthly.

We decided to find a home that had a mother-in-law unit separate from the main house.

We helped (substantially) in the purchase of their home in order to have this unit be our separate space.

We felt this was a better option than buying a small studio or condo (about the same amount regarding the investment) to be close to them and the grandchildren.

They were excited to do this with us.

Now they are using it as a guesthouse for friends when we are not there.

Often, it isn't as clean as we leave it, and there has been conflict at times with friends visiting when we planned to be there.

We don't feel comfortable sharing our private space. We have talked with them several times about our feelings, but the issue keeps recurring.

Are we wrong to ask them not to have guests stay in our place?

— Disappointed

Dear Disappointed: You helped substantially with the purchase of this home, but you don't seem to actually own this separate unit, and so this whole arrangement is riding on an understanding.

Your daughter is not respecting the original intent or the impact on you, but if she doesn't respect your wishes and sensitivities after discussing this several times, the issue reveals how she and her husband regard you.

You are not "wrong" to expect exclusive use of this guesthouse, but you should realize that going to the mat over this could affect your relationship in the longer term.

If both parties agree that this is "your" unit, you could install a lock with a changeable code; if they would like to borrow the unit for guests, they would have to contact you for the code.

This would at least put you in charge of access to the unit.

Maid of honor rethinks the 'honor'

AMY DICKINSON
ASK AMY

Dear Amy: I am the "maid of honor" for my best friend's wedding, which is happening this summer.

It's a big job, and I have done my very best to step up in all of the expected ways. Like other people who have faced this demanding role, it can strain a friendship, but my friendship with "Chloe" (the bride) has survived just fine.

So far, anyway.

Last week, Chloe texted me to say that she has just sent out the invitations and that "William," my very steady boyfriend of several years, has not been invited.

She texted me that she feels terrible about this, but this was because of "serious space constraints." She has planned for 125 guests at the reception.

Chloe has met William several times (we live out of state), and she knows that we live together.

I'm completely shocked by this exclusion, and I don't know how to respond.

Any ideas?

— Mad MOH

Dear Mad: One of the most basic guidelines concerning wedding invitations is that engaged couples, long-time partners and couples living together should be invited as a couple.

"Chloe" might justify her rudeness by thinking that her attendants will be very busy on her wedding day, and because you won't be able to spend much time with "William" during the ceremony and reception, she might as well exclude him.

My instinct is that this is yet one more sacrifice you are expected to make as her maid of honor. Some honor, right?

In terms of responding, I think you should be calm and very clear. Speak to her: "Chloe, I'm asking you to invite William to your wedding. I'm sorry that you feel pressured, but it's the right thing to do. I have stepped up in many ways to make this day great for you, and I'd appreciate you finding the space for him."

If she freaks out, don't respond right away. Just wait quietly.

After a week or two, you should have an answer from her.

In my opinion, either way you do have an obligation to carry on with your role in the wedding, but the longer-term friendship might take a real hit.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Failing to meet deadlines or abandoning projects creates problems, and defaulting on deadlines or obligations may mean you won't be offered any more opportunities. Coordinate with others to get things finished.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — History repeats itself endlessly if no one learns. Examine your relationships and notice repeating themes such as choosing similar types, or choosing people with the same kinds of issues. Do the self-work to break bad patterns.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Others may know they messed up and already feel bad. Make your boundaries clear and observe whether it's a pattern. Once someone does something 3 times, those aren't mistakes, that is their character.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Taking someone at face value could be a mistake; few people are as fabulous as their curated social media profiles may suggest. The person behind the buzz is just as imperfect as anyone else. Let time show you the real person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Experience is the very best teacher. Gear up for approaching deadlines and work out a step-by-step method for getting it all done. Don't engage in paralysis by analysis. Find a way to start and Once you've begun, keep going.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Always own your piece of any situation. Personal power and self-esteem are built on a basis of accountability, not trying to shift blame. Do needed self-work before you inflict damage on someone who likes you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — A work party can be something of an oxymoron; someone's usually watching. Enjoy socializing with coworkers but keep this in mind. Things that are hilarious at the end of the day can become offensive by morning.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Sometimes multitasking just means doing several things badly; many things require undivided attention to do properly. When work is completed satisfactorily, set aside time to dedicate to friends or family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Volume may be inversely related to accuracy; the loudest person in the room may believe that shouting will be persuasive. Avoid the temptation to engage; you may end up hoarse without moving the needle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You may be determined to succeed and it could soon be the right time to make your move. Watch the stars for the best timing for success. There could be some challenges, but none of them are likely beyond your ability.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Not every choice has the same import or the same consequences. Being cautious with your money, avoiding risks, and waiting for the best timing can give you the opportunity to make the most meaningful move.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — It's important to find the right time to let go and move on. Assess it all without shame, understand your part, make any needed amends. Remember it all and never forget. But you must forgive to be able to move forward.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Opportunities for advancement may be coming your way. Others may know how good you are and what you can do, but it's up to you to be prepared if the call comes. Think about your goals and future plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Often the familiar is more comfortable than the unknown. Today is a good day in the universal sky. If your personal cycles are equally good, if you venture into new territory, someone exciting may be waiting for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Negative experiences can be additive and make you afraid everything in the future will fail for the same reasons they did in the past. You are the common denominator in your history, but you can learn from the past and not repeat.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Focus on getting everything tidy on the home front. There usually isn't any way to go back and have the conversation again with all the clever lines you thought of too late, so try to stop replaying them inside your head.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You may be having trouble sustaining your current lifestyle, and trying to stretch the money you have might leave you short all around. Temporary sacrifices may help, whether you pick up a side hustle or drop some indulgences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Falling in love on your first date only happens if you are projecting the movie of your hopes and dreams onto their face. Really knowing a person takes time as you observe them in a variety of circumstances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Having to deal with a big ego can be difficult if they insist that everything is wrong because they're not the star – some people never get enough attention. Don't let tantrums interfere with everyone else's night, the party is for everyone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You and your homies may be ready for a new experience. Get away from your familiar spots and try somewhere you haven't been. Whether it is great or horrible, discover it together. Don't try to amaze, focus on togetherness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Some arguments may seem extra bitter and personal lately. Even though someone may still profess love, they may not be willing to hear your side. If blood relations won't listen, find your chosen family.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — True wealth is inward and is built through love, empathy, accountability, and integrity. No clothes, cars, or bling can satisfy like having true self-respect. Money can help some situations but self-esteem helps everything.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Don't info dump or love bomb too much, too soon. Pace yourself so you won't scare a potential new friend or new love away. Even if you think you're sure, give the situation time to develop more fully.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — The more you try to force a situation into fitting into your list, or meeting your expectations, the more likely it is that it won't work out. Judge things by what they are, not by what you want them to be.

Uecker, 90, expected to broadcast Brewers' opener

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — Bob Uecker will be back behind the microphone when the Milwaukee Brewers play their home opener Tuesday against the Minnesota Twins.

How heavy a broadcasting workload the 90-year-old Uecker will have the rest of the season remains uncertain.

"Bob Uecker calling the first pitch of the Brewers home opener is the official start of summer in Milwaukee," Brewers president of business operations Rick Schlesinger said Wednesday in a statement the team released on social media. "Bob expects to be back at the mic on April 2 to call the game on WTMJ and the network, and he'll take it one day at a time after that."

Uecker has been synonymous with Milwaukee baseball for over half a century. Uecker became the voice of the Brewers in 1971 and has been part of their broadcast team ever since, though he has limited himself to home radio assignments for the last several years.

Last season, Uecker maintained a regular pregame presence on the field and in the locker room. He even participated in the Brewers' champagne-soaked, locker-room celebration after they clinched their NL Central title.

The Brewers have honored him with two statues, one that's outside American Family Field and another in the back row of the terrace level, a nod to the old Miller Lite commercial in which he said, "I must be in the front row!" as he was escorted to the back of a stadium.

Uecker had his 50th season of broadcasting baseball during that 2020 campaign.

Uecker played in the majors from 1962-67 with the Milwaukee/Atlanta Braves, St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Phillies, but he became much more famous during his post-playing career.
